

MIKE WILKINSON, Vice Chair, UKRPA

Mike Wilkinson is the VC of the UK Revenue Protection Association and on the board of the executive committee. Working with the membership to collectively give expert knowledge and experience in matters of energy theft to the UK government, Ofgem and strategic partners.

Mike is the managing director of Revenue Protection Consultancy UK Ltd, with extensive international consulting experience and expertise in strategic, regulatory and commercial issues.

He has a keen understanding and 32 years of practical experience, specialising in the application of effective regulation and combatting non technical losses in the electricity and gas industries.

Mike is often asked to present at conferences and workshops spanning four continents, and to chair proceedings of expert panels. He can be relied on to give his personal and industry experience into the analysis of the issues that the participants face, and to help practitioners inside and outside the industry to solve their problems and plan for success.

All incidences reported on this infographic have previously been reported in the UK media. The link between energy theft and personal injury or damage to property can be hard to prove due to the severe damage that electrical fires and gas explosions can cause. ‘A woman was killed from the actions of her son!! He admitted what he had done to police and was charged with causing her death. A subsequent investigation showed that families in five of the eight flats had all bypassed their meters in the same way, endangering not just their own lives and property, but those of their neighbours and any innocent visitors’

Welcome to the UKRPA

The UKRPA is a trade association open to companies involved in detecting and dealing with meter tampering and illegal abstraction of electricity and gas (generally known as Revenue Protection - RP) and providers of products and services to those companies.

Why report meter tampering?

When someone tampers with their meter they are causing a safety hazard, putting everyone at risk. They are also costing the service providers money, raising costs for everyone - including you!
